HERACLES Group supports the development of the Hemodynamic Laboratory at the Achillopouleio General Hospital of Volos

HERACLES Group once again demonstrates that the communities where it operates are the heart of its activities, performing “One more labour for Health” in the area of Magnesia, as part of the multidimensional Corporate Social Responsibility program “One more labour”.

In particular, HERACLES Group is standing by the citizens of Volos and the health professionals of the region by fully funding the development of the Hemodynamic Laboratory at the Achillopouleio General Hospital of Volos. With this sponsorship, the Group contributes substantially to the operation of this important infrastructure project that will ensure better health conditions for patients with heart and other conditions. With the operation of the Haemodynamic Laboratory, patients will be granted immediate and easy access to essential medical tests, sparing them the travel to hospitals in neighbouring cities.

This sponsorship is added to a series of actions taken by HERACLES Group aiming to strengthening the Hospital and substantially supporting all public health institutions.

Mr. Ioannis Dokos, Governor of the Achillopouleio General Hospital of Volos, stated: “We would like to thank the Management of HERACLES Group for its kind contribution to the development of the Hemodynamic Laboratory at the General Hospital of Volos.”

Mr. Michalis Vlachos, Manager of the HERACLES Plant in Volos, stated: “For all of us in HERACLES Group, every action contributing to people’s Health and Safety is a matter of culture. We feel proud when we can contribute to substantial projects that help ensure the health of our fellow citizens. We therefore undertook the sponsorship for the development of the Hemodynamic Laboratory at Achillopouleio General Hospital of Volos, so that every resident of the community may have access to more integrated and upgraded healthcare services locally.
